Never in its 30-year history has the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA) been so powerfully and broadly enforced. 2007 was a landmark enforcement year and the trend continues in 2008. U.S. regulators are extending FCPA liability to US and non-US companies in record numbers and imposing the highest ever criminal and civil fines, penalties and other sanctions for both individuals and corporate offenders.

Michelle A. Blaine, a U. S. lawyer with an expertise in global corporate corruption, advises multinational companies on risk mitigation and compliance issues, including the FCPA and anti-corruption policy and training. She will discuss the FCPA, the continued enforcement risks international companies face, and the importance of and how to develop a solid anti-bribery compliance program and train your executives and employees in worldwide operations, environmental litigation, alternative dispute resolution.
